

Dawn Blossoms Plucked at Dusk is a collection of prose rich in meanings. The author reflects his real journey of the heart through the memories of his childhood and life of his juvenile years as well as his deep missing of his teachers and friends; he also describes various social realities during the period from the late Qing to the Revolution of 1911 from many profiles, from the villages to the towns, from his hometown to the alien lands, from his homeland to the foreign countries. In his personal feelings of life, he praises the simpleness, goodness and dreams of good life of the working people; he deeply exposes, satirizes and criticizes the old feudal customs and cultural dross; he expresses his deep sympathy to the unfair treatment received by the patriotic intellectuals and feels indignant at that; he looks on his broad-minded teachers of the foreign countries with respect and love. The novel The Scream fully reflects the thoroughly and unflinchingly anti-imperialism and anti-feudalism time spirit of the May Fourth Movement; lively depicts the broad picture of Chinese society before and after the Revolution of 1911; successfully models the Madman, Kong Yiji, Run Tu, Ah Q and other immortal typical images; exposes the cannibalism nature of the feudal society as well as the cruelty and cunning of the feudal influence; accuses the devastating and poisoning sins of the feudal ethical code, imperial examination system and the feudal thought; criticizes the tendency towards compromise and the non-thoroughness of the revolutions led by the bourgeoisie; artistically displays the lessons of the bourgeoisie and arouses the mass of people to carry the anti-imperialism and anti-feudalism democratic revolutions through to the end.
