

Attribution theory has applications in traditional as well as new psychological fields of investigation. In this book, which presents the papers of the Third Attribution-Personality Theory Conference, researchers address the trait versus state dichotomy from an attributional perspective, the relation of attribution theory to script theory, and attribution theory applied to the problems of couples in marital therapy. Each chapter presents new issues and new research in examining attributions from such diverse points of view as existential attributions to information processing and decision making to examining feelings of success in terms of corporate scripts in the workplace. This book demonstrates the youth and vigour of attribution theory, which is progressively becoming integrated into a unified science and body of knowledge. This book of proceedings on social psychology, personality psychology and motivational psychology is intended for researchers.
