Not illustrated. 1898 Excerpt: ...of newspaper advertising that is little short of quackery, in fact there is but a little difference and that consists in the fact that the quack pays his money and stands responsible for the tooting of his own bazoo, while the other fellow hides behind the reporter and hasnt even the merit of paying a fair price for his puffs. Some physicians (and I am thankful that this society now has none of them) are ever alert for the opportunity to get into print, not through the legitimate channel of the medical journals but through the secular press, and every now and then some of us, as you will all agree, smile knowingly to ourselves as we discover in reading our local paper-) the covert advertisement in the announcement, evidently inspired, that The distinguished Dr. Maximus, whose fame as a surgeon is rapidly spreading beyond the borders of his own state by reason of his phenomenal success in difficult and dangerous operations, had the honor of entertaining at lunch the eminent Dr. Minimus and the rising Dr. Optimus from Quackville. In an article to the American Journal of Surgery and Gynecology of August, 1897, I took occasion to say relative to that journals fight on this line: Your war against newspaper charlatanism is timely. It is indeed time the medical profession, and especially medical societies, become aroused if our profession is to preserve its respectability. There are hundreds of physicians in the ranks of our profession who are dragging it into the mire by using the editorial columns of the newspapers for advertising purposes when their use of the advertising columns would entail swift punishment. As unworthy of respect as is the medical Pariah who uses the advertising pages of the daily press in his business, he is infinitely m...
